The case for why tackling climate change should be a labour of love. 'Global Warming and the Sweetness of Life: A Tar Sands Tale' by Matt Hern and Am Johal, with Joe Sacco (MIT Press, £14.95, ISBN: 9780262037648) is a book like no other - one of the most peculiar I have read in a while. There's a plethora of books on global warming - the most dangerous phenomenon of our times and one that Hern and Sacco choose to refer to as 'the climate change'.

Summary. Seeking new definitions of ecology in the tar sands of northern Alberta and searching for the sweetness of life in the face of planetary crises. Confounded by global warming and in search of an affirmative politics that links ecology with social change, Matt Hern and Am Johal set off on a series of road trips to the tar sands of northern Alberta--perhaps the world's largest industrial site, dedicated to the dirty work of extracting oil from Alberta's vast reserves.

Global Warming and the Sweetness of Life | The MIT Press

Hern and Johal aren't necessarily covering any totally new ground here, but as a travelogue, comic, and readable introduction to contemporary debates in ecological thought, Global Warming and the Sweetness of Life would make a really great book for an introductory undergraduate course.
