Wild Meat and the Bully Burgers is a Japanese American-Hawaiian adult fiction novel by Lois-Ann Yamanaka. Its tonality is distinctive to that of a local Hawaiian culture in that all the main characters speak in Hawaiian Pidgin. Although it is an adult fiction novel, the plot follows a young Japanese girl throughout her years in middle school. The major themes of the novel include comparing a mother-daughter relationship with a father-daughter one, finding one's identity, and the politics of Japa

Particularly for the students who grew up in Hawai'i, do you feel that even though Wild Meat and the Bully Burgers is a work of fiction it rings more truth than not? Why or why not? Why do you think Lovey feels it is "Just better to be haole"? Do you think Lovey is justified in wanting to give up her heritage in order to assimilate?
